January Commentary

Your Fund (O Acc GBP) returned -1.9% during the month compared to +3.1% for the FTSE All-Share Index TR.

The negative return was entirely driven by weakness across a group of digital and information businesses that the market currently views as being at risk of disruption or heightened competition from Artificial Intelligence (AI). This continues a theme that has been prominent over the past year, with markets increasingly distinguishing between perceived 'AI winners' and 'AI losers'. Having invested through technological change in the past, we are conscious that we are in the early stages of AI adoption, and we continue to assess both risks and opportunities with an open mind. Investors should however take comfort from the fact that the Fund's digital holdings, including Experian, RELX and Sage, are leading franchises with strong competitive positions, deep customer relationships and long track records of investing in technology and data capabilities, including AI. Valuations across this group have improved meaningfully, with attractive dividend yields available across a number of businesses. Away from the Fund's digital assets, returns were generally strong in the month. Our objective remains to build a diversified portfolio of high-quality, dividend-paying businesses with resilient cashflows and sustainable long-term compounding potential.

We continued to refine the portfolio with a focus on valuation discipline and diversification of return drivers. We reduced exposure to selected overseas digital holdings, including exiting our position in Paychex and trimming Amadeus, reflecting a desire to manage concentration in asset-light franchises amid increased volatility. We also sold Big Yellow Group and recycled capital into UK holdings with more attractive valuation support and cashflow characteristics, including Howden Joinery and LondonMetric Property. In addition, we exited a small position in Fever-Tree and initiated a position in UK aerospace company Melrose Industries where we see scope for material operational improvement and cash generation over time. Finally, we increased our holding in Admiral following share price declines linked to market concerns around autonomous vehicles.
