January Commentary

Your Fund (O Acc GBP) returned -0.3% during the month.

2021 started noisily. Vaccine rollouts, of varying success by country, led to a continuation of some of Q4 2020's recovery in cyclical stocks. Added to this were market gyrations exacerbated by retail participation; many could be forgiven for losing sight of the bigger picture in January. But recent days have also seen the release of calendar 2020 earnings and, with them, an indication as to which companies are best placed for the future.

The pandemic saw a step up in the world's digital economy, most of which will not reverse. Microsoft, a vital enabler of digitisation and the Strategy's largest equity holding, last year offered free services such as short-term Office subscriptions, as well as better payment terms to many of its customers. This was important during a difficult year. It is also consistent with the long-sightedness of the management team; technology spend as a % of GDP is due to double over the next decade. The company has built tremendous loyalty with businesses around the world.

At the same time, the company's current results continue to excel. In the quarter to December, revenues grew 15% and *free cash flow (FCF) 17%. The company's cloud platform, Microsoft Azure, saw growth accelerate in the quarter to 50% as the secular transition to cloud-based working continues apace. Microsoft, the number two in cloud infrastructure, is incredibly well placed thanks to existing business relationships, an integrated suite of software solutions and a strong emphasis on security. As Azure continues to scale, it also becomes more profitable, providing operating leverage for the company as a whole.

Our focus continues to be on businesses that have the capacity and vision to make investments for the very long term. 2020 provided an excellent indication of which companies are both able and willing to do so.

*The FCF is the cash a company generates after taking into consideration cash outflows that support its operations and maintain its capital assets.
