January Commentary

Your Fund returned +1.1% during the month compared to +3.1% for the FTSE All-Share Index TR.

2026 started dramatically, with many trends from 2025 continuing into the New Year. The most notable of which has been the strengthening rally in precious metals. The gold price surged to new all-time highs during January, starting the year at $4,322/oz, rising as high as $5,335/oz, and ending the month +13% at $4,894.

Since reducing the Fund's gold holdings last autumn at ~$4,000/oz, we had allowed the percentage of exposure to bullion to drift up to 14%, well above the long-term range of 10-12%. With the price exceeding ~$5,100/oz, we decided to reduce the holding to ~10%, the lowest since April 2019. This does not change our long-term view on the yellow metal. However, after such a strong run, there is plenty of room for a setback. Investment banks have recently become highly enthusiastic towards precious metals, which was certainly not the case a couple of years ago. They suggest tantalising year-end 2026 price targets of over $6,000/oz. This cheerleading makes us nervous, and we recognise in the short term there is scope for disappointment. We would not wish to make the cardinal sin of getting evermore bullish into rising prices.

One factor, which may affect the gold price in 2026 is the new Chairman of the Federal Reserve, Kevin Warsh. His appointment was announced at the end of the month. Warsh was considered more hawkish than the rest of the shortlist for the job and he was censorious of the Ben Bernanke-led Fed's QE and zero interest rate policies following the financial crisis. Yet, despite previous desires for tighter, 'sound' money, which could be construed as gold-bearish, Warsh seems keen on cutting rates, justified by deflationary pressures from the AI productivity boom. Lower rates are often positive for the gold price, although we are conscious of the uncertain policy environment in the US, coupled with ambiguity on the Fed's independence, which may unnerve more speculative holders in the short term.

Important Information

Please refer to Troy's Glossary of Investment terms here. Fund performance data provided is calculated net of fees with income reinvested unless stated otherwise. All performance and income data is in relation to the stated share class, performance of other share classes may differ. Past performance is not a guide to future performance. Overseas investments may be affected by movements in currency exchange rates. The value of an investment and any income from it may fall as well as rise and investors may get back less than they invested. The historic yield reflects distributions declared over the past twelve months as a percentage of the fund's price, as at the date shown. It does not include any preliminary charge and investors may be subject to tax on their distributions. The UK Retail Prices Index (RPI) is a target benchmark for the fund as the Fund aims to achieve a return (the money made or lost on an investment) that is above the rate of inflation, reference to other benchmarks are for comparative purposes only. Tax legislation and the levels of relief from taxation can change at any time. Any change in the tax status of a Fund or in tax legislation could affect the value of the investments held by the Fund or its ability to provide returns to its investors. The tax treatment of an investment, and any dividends received, will depend on the individual circumstances of the investor and may be subject to change in the future. The yield is not guaranteed and will fluctuate. Any objective will be treated as a target only and should not be considered as an assurance or guarantee of performance of the Fund or any part of it. The Fund may use currency forward derivatives for the purpose of efficient portfolio management. The UK RPI figures shown are a combination of the actual rate of RPI, as calculated by the Office of National Statistics, and estimates for the previous month. Information on the risks of an investment in the fund can be found in the Prospectus.
