October Commentary

Your Fund returned -2.8% during the month compared to -2.3% for the MSCI World Index NR (£).

These are challenging times for investors and corporates. Rising bond yields, conflict in the Middle East, and weaker corporate earnings combine to foster uncertainty and nervousness. The stock market is moving brutally fast to punish companies for any hint of deterioration. In a sign of toughening conditions for all, weaker players are being found out across a swathe of industries, testing the resolve of all investors and reinforcing our own strategic objective to own 'the best of the best'.

Some of the Fund's own holdings shared in this month's volatility. Alphabet reported excellent results for its main advertising-based businesses (Search and YouTube), but its fast-growing cloud services division ('GCP') unexpectedly slowed. This is at odds with hopes for an AI-led boom and the shares declined -9.5%. We remain optimistic about GCP's position in selling AI services and believe it will succeed in developing a substantially larger and more profitable cloud business over the coming years.

Experian's shares declined -9.7% when US peer TransUnion warned of slowing growth trends. Whatever economic headwinds there may be, we have confidence that they will be more manageable for Experian because of the quality of its customer base and the broad diversity of its product offering.

Over the past couple of years there has been a wider than normal dispersion of returns among the Fund's investments. This has emphasised the importance of balancing between companies operating in different industries and exposed to a variety of risks and opportunities. It also creates potential for the reallocation of capital towards those areas that to us appear most mispriced. We used last month's volatility to build our position in several investments, including Experian. These decisions are only possible with a deep appreciation of our companies' rare quality and a clear focus on longer-term investment outcomes.
