October Commentary

Your Fund (O Acc GBP) returned +3.9% during the month compared to +3.7% for the FTSE All-Share Index (TR).

October was a busy month for corporate earnings. Those portfolio companies reporting results collectively made good progress, growing earnings at a healthy rate. This was pleasing to see amidst the negative headlines of tariffs, geopolitics, and low broad economic growth. Two updates that stood out to us were those of LSEG and Next plc ("Next").

After a strong 2024, LSEG shares have weakened more recently after entering the year on a relatively high valuation but being on the wrong side of the current AI narrative. Q3 results however were strong, with the company delivering broad-based growth, accelerating subscription revenues and good operating leverage. The management team also took the opportunity to tackle the AI debate head on, providing a robust defence of the barriers surrounding their real-time and proprietary data. Pleasingly, the shares responded positively to results, rising +11% in the month. Trading on a c.5% free cash flow yield, the shares remain good value in our opinion.

Next also delivered strong performance, along with a further upgrade to guidance in their Q3 update. Whilst every division is currently growing, their international business continues to be the standout performer, growing +39% in the period, following +28% in H1 and +25% last year. Next are finding that their increasingly wide range of brands and offerings have appeal well beyond the UK, with their substantial uplift in overseas marketing spend being met with very strong demand.

Along with reporting good financials, both Next and LSEG demonstrated the type of buyback discipline and capital allocation we like to see in our companies. Next have recently paused their buyback in response to share price strength. LSEG, on the other hand, have stepped up buybacks following share price weakness. We covered share buybacks in our recent newsletter which can be read here, arguing for keeping valuation front and centre in any repurchase decision.
